Subject objectives	The course deals with the concept of globalization. A multidisciplinary approach will permit to focus differences between different aspects of this process. A long-term approach will also give the opportunity to compare different kinds of processes that scholars call globalization. The course will consider various historical periods that experienced a widening of the international markets and the forms that shaped these different phenomena. The use of movies and other media will give students the opportunity to interact with the different faces of today's globalization process.
